No clue has been found to indicate what has become of William Dehne, Long Grove garage owner. His disappearance develops the deepest mystery that has arisen in this community since the sensational Krueger murder case twenty years ago when George Krueger murdered his wife and her mother and later served a term in prison on the double-murder charge.

Not since then has the little hamlet been stirred as now with the sudden and mysterious disappearance of Mr. Dehne.

Discovery of a hammer and a piece of rope in the roadside near the abandoned Dehne auto lead to the theory that possibly Dehne was slugged with the hammer and a rope used to bind him, the piece found on the road being what was left after the kidnapers had used what they wanted.

The police of Zion are seeking the ownership of a 1923 model Ford touring car which was abandoned Friday night near the North Prairie church, four miles west of Zion after vandals had wrecked vengeance on it. The four tires were slashed with a knife, the cushions and upholstery were slashed into ribbons and the petcocks were opened to allow the oil and gasoline to run out.

Spencer Crawford, a farmer living near the North Prairie church, first saw the car Thursday night. At that time the headlights on the machine were lit and the engine was running. He passed by without thinking much about it. Friday morning he passed again and the car still was where he first had seen it with the exception that the engine had stopped after the gasoline was exhausted.

Constable Casperson of Zion was notified and towed the machine to town. The machine could not be identified because the state license plates had been removed. Whether the car was stolen and then abandoned or whether vandals came along and damaged it has not yet been determined. No such car has been reported stolen.

City Attorney Frank Ruzicka of Burlington had a set-to with a large hawk on the Karcher farm recently in which he received some bad lacerations on the leg. Mr. Ruzicka had wounded the hawk with a small rifle. He procured a pole, the hawk clutched it and he started to carry it to the house. Suddenly the hawk dove at Ruzicka, fastening its claws in his leg just above the knee. An exciting few minutes followed before Ruzicka finally killed the bird. Bad flesh wounds from the claws resulted.

The selection Monday afternoon by the Lake County Republican Central Committee of Fred Lundin as one of the candidates from Lake County to the state convention at Springfield is significant inasmuch as it appears to mark the real entrance of Mr. Lundin into Lake County politics.

For years Mr. Lundin has been a powerful factor in Chicago and Cook county politics. In fact it is admitted that he wields more power in Chicago than any other one man.

While Mr. Lundin has maintained a regular residence in Chicago he always has maintained a fine home at Fox Lake and has spent much of the year there. It is apparent that he now has established a residence in Lake County and doubtless will become a potent factor in local politics.

Allowing the tow rope to slacken, after which it wound around the wheel in such a manner as to throw the car into the ditch, was responsible for the injuries received by Albert Walburg of Burlington and John Markey of Kenosha, on the New Munster road Saturday afternoon. They were driving a car being towed to Burlington for repairs by Frank Albrecht and making the corner at New Munster failed to apply the brakes. The car was wrecked when it went into the ditch and the young men received numerous cuts and bruises.

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Thursday, April 21, 1904

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bryant on Monday, April 11, a boy.

Lew Gullidge who has spent the past winter in California, returned home the later part of the week.

On Friday of last week Alfred Horton left with his family for Chetek, Wis., where he purchased a farm some time ago.

David Lightner returned home on Monday after having spent the winter at Sioux Rapids, Iowa.

Miss Addie Schaffer was in Chicago Monday purchasing new millinery goods and in a few days expects to have on hand a full line of ladies and childrens summer hats in all the leading colors and styles.

The village election held Tuesday at the village hall was a quiet affair although there was an opposition to the regular caucus ticket, but there being no president of the board up for election this year accounts, in a measure, for the light vote cast. The Peoples' Party ticket received 67 straight votes while the Independent ticket received 17. The whole number of votes cast was 107 being 30 votes less than were cast last year.

We understand that J. C. James, Jr., of our village will enter the race for minority representative on the Democratic ticket, and that his name will be presented at the Lake County convention for endorsement for Lake County's choice for representative.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hamlin of Lake Villa are now occupying their own house.

The Junior Epworth League held a meeting at Grayslake with the Antioch and Lake Villa leagues and an interesting meeting was held.

The Hamlin Bros., of Lake Villa have a contract for building five new cottages at Fox Lake.

Farmers Aroused Over Discovery of T. B. Cows

Farmers all over Lake County are viewing with keen interest the action of the state inspectors in condemning sixteen head of cattle on the Portegys farm near Grayslake as a result of which they will be slaughtered after being shipped to the stockyards in Chicago. The carcasses then will be buried.

Some time ago the Lake County Board of Supervisors voted to employ an expert whose business it is to weed out tuberculosis from the dairy herds of the county. This inspector has the power to order the infected cows slaughtered. The county board and practically every farmer in Lake county stand back of him in the enforcement of this regulation as there is a widespread sentiment to have infected cows weeded out.

Up to the present time it had been supposed that there was very little bovine tuberculosis in the county. As a result of the discovery on the Portegys farm. It is probable that all farmers will make a close inspection of their own herds and weed out any cattle which may be found to be tubercular, for while there is a temporary loss it means more to the farmer in the long run to have his herd free from disease.

WAUKEGAN ADOPTS DAYLIGHT SAVING SCHEDULE BY VOTE

Acquiescing to the expressed desires of more than 2,000 voters, the city commission on Monday night voted to put the Daylight Savings plan into effect in Waukegan next Sunday morning at two o'clock, simultaneously with Chicago. The new schedule will remain in effect until the fourth Sunday in September when it automatically will revert to standard time.

In putting Daylight Savings in effect the council acted after a straw vote had been taken in which the general public was given an opportunity to express a preference. For Daylight Savings—1,280. Against Daylight Savings—738.

Fox Lake Man in Train Crash at Grayslake

Jos. Shrer, 32 years old, said to be the son of a Fox Lake hotel keeper, lies unconscious at the Lake County General hospital with a fractured skull following a collision with No. 1 train on the Soo line at the Belvidere street crossing near Grayslake early Tuesday morning.

From what has been learned at the hospital was driving west on Belvidere street on his way to Fox Lake about 2:30 in the morning. At the intersection of the railway and the road, a mile southeast of Grayslake, Shrer crashed into the engine of No. 1, hitting it near the cylinder. His Ford was swung around by the crash and bumped along the road leaving it a complete wreck.

Shrer was knocked unconscious by the collision and was rushed to the hospital by C. B. McCormick, James Moran and Joseph Spencer.

Early examinations showed that the skull was fractured and that he had sustained countless cuts and bruises. He has been unconscious since the accident and in delirium that has made it necessary to place him in a straight-jacket.

Henry B. Eger Died Saturday Afternoon

Henry B. Eger, former supervisor from Libertyville died on Saturday afternoon at his home. Word of his death was received by his many friends who have known him through his activities in business and as a member of the board.

Mr. Eger has been ill for some time and within the last few months has undergone blood transfusions at the Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan. Recently he was removed to his home and for days the end has been expected by those close to the family.

Physicians had been fighting to save his life though the case appeared hopeless. He has been slowly sinking and though word of his death was a blow to his acquaintances it has not been wholly unexpected.

In his business activities he had been engaged in the hardware trade at Libertyville. For some time he served that township as supervisor and had always taken an active part in the board's proceedings. He was especially noted for his efforts to cut down expenditures and to save money for the tax payers. His was a voice much heard in all of the sessions. His official retirement came a few days ago when the new board organized.

Friends in Libertyville and throughout the county were free in their praise of Mr. Eger. He was well liked and admired as a careful business man and friend.

Recent sessions of the board have been held without his being present. He had been confined to his bed with an attack of anemia. In an attempt to stem the ebbing tide of life physicians sought volunteers for transfusions during the last relapse but the transfusion was accomplished to no avail.

Plans are being made to show honor to the memory of the former official.

QUEEN OF THE WEST SOLD AT AUCTION SATURDAY

The Queen of the West, one of the widest known hotels on the chain of lakes, was sold at public auction Saturday at Waukegan.

The bidding was very spirited, R. C. Abt and Russell Edwards bidding it up to a point where all other bidders stopped. Abt and Russell bid up to $25,200, Mr. Abt's last bid, and Mr. Edwards raised it to $25,225, at which price it was sold.

The Queen of the West has been closed for two years. The new owners, it is stated have hinted that they are going to subdivide this property.

Stratton Elected Chairman County Central Committee

Wm. J. Stratton of Ingleside Monday afternoon was unanimously re-elected chairman of the Lake County Central Committee and was unopposed despite reports that a bitter fight would be put up. When the precinct committeemen gathered in the Circuit Court Rooms it became evident that there was to be no opposition to Mr. Stratton's re-election as county chairman.

Ben Miller of Libertyville nominated Wm. Stratton for temporary chairman and Max Przyborski was nominated secretary and A. J. Welch of Highwood as treasurer. The temporary nomination was immediately made permanent and not an opposing vote was recorded.

The convention then adopted a motion that the three officials' names together with Joseph Slomer, Chase Webb and Ray Paddock should act as a committee to name delegates to the state and judicial convention.

The state committee to name delegates is to be held at Springfield on the 18th, the judicial convention at the Garrick theater, Chicago, at 11:00 o'clock on the 22nd. Crooked Officials Fleeing Moorists

Wholesale fleeing of motorists is again being practiced on Cook county highways according to the legal department of the Chicago Motor Club. Conditions are particularly obnoxious in that territory west of Western avenue along 95th, 111th, 147th streets and Kean avenue.

The legal department questions whether many of the arrests made in this territory are for a purpose other than revenue. The attorneys plan to go before a county judge and other proper officers with a petition to revoke the power of justices who are guilty of irregularities and who have combined with arresting officers in an endeavor to mulct the public, and if necessary present the matter to the county judge.

The legal department of the club points out that no village has a right to pass an ordinance regulating speed. The speed of automobiles is regulated by a state law and this law specifically provides that no city or village has a right to enact an ordinance controlling speed.

Whether or not a car is speeding is determined by the facts in each individual case—no specific rate is provided for because the controlling part of the act is whether or not the car is being driven at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard for the traffic and use of the highway. The language of the law speaks for itself.

Ford Day and Firemen's Ball For May 22

The local fire department at their regular meeting Tuesday night appointed committees to arrange plans for another celebration like the one given last year on Ford Day.

The date has been set for Thursday, May 22, and will again be run in conjunction with a Ford Day. Plans are all ready completed for the holding of a dance in the evening in the Antioch Sales and Service Station, similar to the one held last year, when this large space was filled to capacity.

The committees were instructed to make an even better celebration than that of last year—which will be some task.

Those who attended last year's affair will undoubtedly be on hand and it is hoped that those who were not able to attend will join the crowd at this banner celebration for this section of Lake county.

BARGAIN DAY PAGE

STILL HOLDS GOOD
Antioch housewives have proven that they know bargains when they see them. Most of the merchants in town each Saturday are offering a leader at a very much reduced price. These leaders have all been taken advantage of. The merchants will continue to give these bargains, and hope more of the thrifty housewives, and yes, the men folks too, will continue to watch this special page each week as well as the other advertisements in the paper—for a bigger, better, and busier Antioch.

Zen of The Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC

Copyright by Robert Stead

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Transley's hay-cutting outfit, after stacking 2,000 tons, is on its way to the big Y.D. ranch headquarters. Transley is a master of men and circumstances. Linder, foreman, is substantial, but not self-assured. George Drakz, one of the men, is an irresponsible chap who proposes to every woman he meets. Transley and Linder dine with Y.D. and his wife and daughter Zen. Transley resolves to marry Zen. Y.D. instructs Transley to cut the South Y.D. "spite o' h— an' high water" and a fellow named Landson.

CHAPTER II.—Drakz proposes to Zen and is neatly rebuffed. Transley pitches camp on the South Y.D. and finds Landson's outfit cutting hay. Denison Grant, Landson's manager, notifies Transley that he is working under a lease from the legal owners and warns Transley off. All of which means war.

"My name is Grant," said the stranger; "Denison Grant. I am employed by Mr. Landson, who has a ranch down the valley. If I am not mistaken you are Mr. Transley."

"You are not mistaken," Transley replied.

"And I am perhaps further correct," continued Grant, "in surmising that you are here on behalf of the Y.D., and propose cutting hay in this valley?"

"Your grasp of the situation does you credit," Transley's manner was that of a man prepared to meet trouble somewhat more than half way.

"And I may further surmise," continued Grant, quite untroubled, "that Y.D. neglected to give you one or two points of information bearing upon the ownership of this land, which would doubtless have been of interest to you?"

"Suppose you dismount," said Transley. "I like to look a man in the face when I talk business to him."

"That's fair," returned Grant, swinging lightly from his horse. "I have a preference that way myself." He advanced to within arm's length of Transley and for a few moments the two men stood measuring each other. It was steel boring steel; there was not a flicker of an eyelid.

"We may as well get to business, Grant," said Transley at length. "I also can do some surmising. I surmise that you were sent here by Landson to forbid me to cut hay in this valley. On what authority he acts I neither know nor care. I take my orders from Y.D. Y.D. said cut the hay. I am going to cut it."

"You are not?"

Transley's muscles could be seen to go tense beneath his shirt.

"Who will stop me?" he demanded.

"You will be stopped."

"The mounted police?" There was contempt in his voice, but the contempt was not for the force. It was for the rancher who would appeal to the police to settle a "friendly" dispute.

"No, I don't think it will be necessary to call in the police," returned Grant, dropping back to his pleasant, casual manner. "You know Y.D., and doubtless you feel quite safe under his wing. But you don't know Landson. Neither do you know the facts of the case—the right and wrong of it. Under these handicaps you cannot reach a decision which is fair to yourself and to your men."

"Further argument is simply waste of time," Transley interrupted. "I have told you my instructions, and I have told you that I am going to carry them out. Have you had your supper?"

"Yes, thanks. All right, we won't argue any more. I'm not arguing now—I'm telling you. Y.D. has cut hay in this valley so long he thinks he owns it, and the other ranchers began to think he owned it. But Landson has been making a few inquiries. He finds that these are not public lands, but are privately owned by speculators in New York. He has contracted with the owners for the hay rights of these lands for five years, beginning with the present season. He is already cutting farther down the valley, and will be cutting here within a day or two."

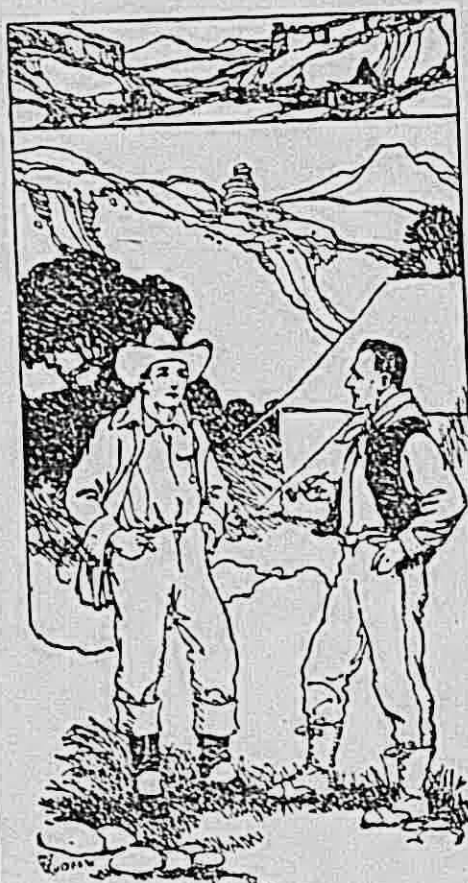

"The trout ought to bite on a fine evening like this," said Transley. "I have an extra rod and some flies. Will you try a throw or two with me?"

"I would be glad to, but I must get back to camp. I hope you land a good string," and so saying Grant remounted, nodded to Transley and again to the men now scattered about the camp, and started his horse on an easylope down the valley.

"Well, what is it to be?" said Linder, coming up with the rest of the boys. "War?"

"War if they fight," Transley replied, unconcernedly. "Y.D. said cut the hay; spite o' h— an' high water," he said. That goes."

Slowly the great orb of the sun sank until the crest of the mountains pierced its molten glory and sent it burning their rugged heights. In the east the plains were already wrapped in shadow. Up the valley crept the veil of night, hushing even gloom; the stump and clamping of horses grew less insistent, the cloudlets overhead faded from crimson to mauve to blue to gray.

Transley tapped the ashes from his pipe and went to bed.

CHAPTER III

"How about a ride over to the South Fork this afternoon, Zen?" said Y.D. to his daughter the following morning. "I just want to make sure these boys is hittin' the high spots. The grass is gettin' powerful dry an' you can never tell what may happen."

"You're on," the girl replied across the breakfast table. Her mother looked up sharply. She wondered if the prospect of another meeting with Transley had anything to do with Zen's alacrity.

"I had hoped you would outgrow your slang, Zen," she remonstrated gently. "Men like Mr. Transley are likely to judge your training by your speech."

"I should worry. Slang is to language what feathers are to a hat—they give it distinction, class. They lift it out of the drab commonplace."

"Still, I would not care to be dressed entirely in feathers," her mother thrust quietly.

"Good for you, Mother!" the girl exclaimed, throwing an arm about her neck and plinking a firm kiss on her forehead. "That was a solar plexus. Now I'll try to be good and wear a feather only here and there. But Mr. Transley has nothing to do with it."

"Of course not," said Y.D. "Still, Transley is a man with snap in him. That's why he's boss. So many of these ornery good-for-nothin's is always wishin' they was boss, but they ain't willin' to pay the price. It costs somethin' to get to the head of the herd—an' stay there."

"He seems firm on all fours," the girl agreed. "How do we travel, and when?"

"Better take a democrat, I guess," her father said. "We can throw in a tent and some bedding for you, as we'll maybe stay over a couple of nights."

"The blue sky is tent enough for me," Zen protested, "and I can surely rustle a blanket or two around the camp. Besides, I'll want a riding horse to get around with there."

"You can run him beside the democrat," said her father. "You're gettin' too big to go campin' promise us like when you was a kid."

"That's the penalty for growing up," Zen sighed. "All right, Dad. Say two o'clock?"

The girl spent the morning helping her mother about the house, and casting over in her mind the probable developments of the near future. She would not have confessed outwardly to even a casual interest in Transley, but inwardly she admitted that the promise of another meeting with him gave zest to the prospect. Transley was interesting. At least he was out of the commonplace. His bold directness had rather fascinated her. He had a will. Her father had always admired men with a will, and Zen shared his admiration. Then there was Linder. The fierce light of Transley's charms did not blind her to the glow of quiet capability which she saw in Linder. If one were looking for a husband, Linder had much to recommend him. He was probably less capable than Transley, but he would be easier to manage. . . . But who was looking for a husband? Not Zen. No, no, certainly not Zen.

Then there was George Drakz, whose devotions fluctuated between "that Pete-horse" and the latest female to cross his orbit. At the thought of George Drakz Zen laughed outright. She had played with him. She had made a monkey of him, and he deserved all he had got. It was not the first occasion upon which Zen had let herself drift with the tide, always sure of justifying herself and discomfiting someone by the swift, strong strokes with which, at the right moment, she reached the shore. Zen liked to think of herself as careering through life in the same way as she rode the half-broken horses of her father's range. How many such a horse had thought that the little body on his back was something to race with, to toy with, and, when tired of that, fling precipitately to earth! And not one of those horses but had found that while he might race and toy with his rider within limitations, at the last that light body was master, and not he. . . . Yet Zen loved best the horse that raced wildest and was hardest to bring into subjection.

That was her philosophy of life so far as a girl of twenty may have a philosophy of life. It was to go on and see what would happen, supported always by a quiet confidence that in any pinch she could take care of herself. She had learned to ride and shoot, to sleep out and cook in the open, to ride the ranges after dark by instinct and the stars—she had learned these things while other girls of her age learned the rudiments of fancywork and the scales of the piano.

Her father and mother knew her disposition, loved it, and feared it. They knew that there was never a rider so brave, so skillful, so strong, but some outlaw would throw him at last. So at fourteen they sent her east to a boarding school. In two months she was back with a letter of expulsion, and the boast of having blacked the eyes of the principal's daughter.

"They couldn't teach me any more, Mother," she said. "They admitted it. So here I am."

Y.D. was plainly perplexed. "It's about time you was halter-broke," he commented, "who's goin' to do it?"

"If a girl has learned to read and think, what more can the schools do for her?" she demanded.

And Y.D., never having been to school, could not answer.

The sun was capping the Rockies with molten gold when the rancher and his daughter swung down the foothill slopes to the camp on the South Y.D. Strings of men and horses returning from the upland meadows could be seen from the hillside as they descended.

Y.D.'s sharp eyes measured the scale of operations.

"They're hittin' the high spots," he said, approvingly. "That boy Transley is a hum-dinger."

Zen made no reply.

"I say he's a hum-dinger," her father repeated.

The girl looked up with a quick flush of surprise. Y.D. was no puzzle to her, and if he went out of his way to commend Transley he had a purpose.

"Mr. Transley seems to have made a hit with you, Dad," she remarked, evasively.

"Well, I do like to see a man who's got the goods in him. I like a man that can get there, just as I like a horse that can get there. I've often wondered, Zen, what kind you'd take up with, when it came to that, an' hoped he'd be a live critter. After I'm dead an' buried I don't want no other dead one spendin' my simoleons."

"How about Mr. Linder," said Zen naively.

Her father looked up sharply. "Zen," he said, "you're not serious?"

Zen laughed. "I don't figure you're exactly serious, Dad, in your talk about Transley. You're just feeling out. Well—let me do a little feeling out. How about Linder?"

"Linder's all right," Y.D. replied. "Better than the average. I admit. But he's not the man Transley is. If he was, he wouldn't be workin' for Transley. You can't keep a man down, Zen. If he's got the goods in him, Linder comes up over the average, so's you can notice it, but not like Transley does."

Zen did not pursue the subject. She understood her father's philosophy very well indeed, and, to a large degree, she accepted it as her own. The only quality Y.D. took off his hat to was the ability to do things. And Y.D.'s idea of things was very concrete: it had to do with steers and land, with hay and money and men. It was by such things he measured success. And Zen was disposed to agree with him. Why not? It was the only success she knew.

Transley was greeting them as they drew into camp.

"Glad to see you, Y.D.; honored to have a visit from you, ma'am," he said, as he helped them from the democrat, and gave instructions for the care of their horses. "Supper is waiting, and the men won't be ready to come time."

Y.D. shook hands with Transley cordially. "Zen an' me just thought we'd run over and see how the wind blew," he said. "You got a good spot here for a camp, Transley. But we won't go in to supper just now. Let the men eat first; I always say the work horses should be first at the barn. Well, how's she goin'?"

"Fine," said Transley, "fine," but it was evident his mind was divided. He was glancing at Zen, who stood by during the conversation.

This Man Wouldn't Stay Down

HE was putting in long hours at monotonous unskilled work. His small pay scarcely lasted from one week to the next. Pleasures were few and far between and he couldn't save a cent.

He was down—but he wouldn't stay down! He saw other men promoted, and he made up his mind that what they could do he could do. Then he found the reason they were promoted was because they had special training—an expert knowledge of some one line. So he made up his mind that he would get that kind of training.

He marked and mailed to Scranton a coupon like the one on the right. That was his first step upward. It brought him just the information he was looking for. He found he could get the training he needed right at home in the hours after supper. From that time on he spent part of his spare time studying.

The first reward was not long in coming—an increase in salary. Then came another. Then he was made Assistant Manager. Now he is Manager with an income that means independence and all the comforts and pleasures that make life worth living.

It just shows what a man with ambition can do. And this man is only one out of hundreds of thousands who have climbed the same steps to success with the help of the International Correspondence Schools.

What about you? Are you satisfied merely to hang on where you are or would you, too, like to have a real job and real money? It's entirely up to you. You don't have to stay down. You can climb to the position you want in the work you like best. Yes, you can! The I. C. S. is ready and anxious to come to you, wherever you are, with the very help you need.

Surely when you have an opportunity that means so much, you can't afford to let another priceless hour pass without at least finding out about it. And the way to do that is easy—without cost, without obligating yourself in any way, mark and mail this coupon.

A communication signed by 45 residents of Lake Villa was presented to the county board asking that body to action against Sheriff Ahlstrom, charging that he failed to respond promptly upon March 30, when Irving Pester, a young man of that community, is alleged to have broken in to the home of Anthony Leonard at 2 o'clock in the morning attempting to get to bed, frightening Mrs. Leonard. Pester, it is alleged, made his escape from the home, and later when he was captured by Fred Burke, a constable and locked in the village jail, broke out of the place before the arrival of the sheriff.

The communication stated that Sheriff Ahlstrom's office reported that the automobiles were out of commission, but that they would go to Lake Villa as soon as they could get a machine.

The sheriff and a Waukegan police officer went to Lake Villa next morning after much difficulty due to the condition of the roads.

Sheriff Ahlstrom was at the meeting of the board when the communication was read. He denied the charge that he made no effort to find Pester, now a fugitive on a warrant issued before Justice M. I. Miller, at Lake Villa, charging him with housebreaking. The sheriff declared that he set in motion the machinery for the apprehension of Pester, and also got the co-operation of the Waukegan and North Shore police.

He replied hotly that he did not think it necessary to tell everybody in the world when he started out looking for criminals, and that Frank Hamlin, president of the Village of Lake Villa, who presented the petition, did not know how much of an effort he had made to apprehend Pester.

The petition stated that Lake Villa had no village marshal or constable at the time, and the petitioners stated that they had been advised that it was the duty of the sheriff to respond to make arrests in the village as well as in any other part of the county.

The matter was referred to the new jail committee for investigation.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

FARMERS SHOW INTEREST IN FRUIT GROWING

according to reports coming from the country districts. Farmers are busy seeding oats in all parts of the county and some are plowing. The season is reported as "backward" for usually the farmers have been able to do this work much earlier.

Wheat, which is greening in some parts of the county, is considerably damaged from winter killing. Reports from some of the southern counties of the state is to the effect that it is in worse condition there where there was little snow cover during the extreme weather. Lake county was fortunate in this respect for there was a snow covering during the colder weather.

Farmers of Lake county are of the opinion, however, that despite the fact that the season has been rather backward that the crops will pick up in a hurry before long as they are looking for ideal weather conditions from now on.

From the southern part of the state come reports that fruit trees are blossoming but there has been no indication of such a condition in this part of the state.

"GREEN GODDESS" ON SCREEN AT THE CRYSTAL

Thrills, beauty, drama and tense appeal predominate in "The Green Goddess," which will open at the Crystal theater two days Friday and Saturday. It is a magnificent production, and the sort that is at its best on the screen.

The absolute perfection of detail, the intelligent direction and the gorgeous setting make of it a vital, gripping play that holds one tense.

Charles Arliss, in the role of the Rajah of Rukh, loses none of his subtlety on the screen. The turn of an eye, the shrug of a shoulder, and the wave of a hand express perfectly the cynical, debonaire role he portrays. The element of mystery, and the melodramatic sustinment of the plot are skillfully handled.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Waters of North Chicago spent the week end at their Channel Lake home.

Boosting Antioch

—is more than merely “thinking” or “saying” good things about the town. Real, honest- to-goodness BOOSTING means that every citizen of Antioch must carry out the following principles every day he lives here:

1. Assume his share of civic responsibility and contribute his moral and material support to any movement toward good government. An efficient yet human civic administration is the backbone of a prosperous town.
2. Do his part in getting and keeping good churches and schools, for these institutions are the builders of progress for the coming generation.
3. Patronize home merchants and professional men, for they are mainly responsible for the comforts, pleasures and opportunities that this community affords to its citizens.

4. Contribute his every effort toward keeping our streets and yards clean and attractive. An attractive town is good business, for a healthy atmosphere is one of the first requisites for drawing new citizens of the right sort.

5. Be generous in thought, word and deed to his neighbors and fellow citizens. Most of the happiness in life is gotten by doing for others and entering into the spirit of cooperation.

These are the principles that, when every person does his best toward actually carrying them out, will bring us all prosperity and happiness. We prosper only as those about us prosper, so—

Every loyal citizen of Antioch is urged to become an active, working partner with us—let's do some REAL boosting for our town by MAKING IT BETTER IN EVERY WAY.

News Notes Taken From Other Papers

Now that the fishing season has opened, the city office is busy issuing fishing licenses to prospective Isaak Waltons. The state laws make it necessary for every fisherman to procure a license in order to fish with a hook and line.

There are no exceptions on account of age. A lad two years old will need a license in order to fish as well as his elders. The permit costs 50 cents for adults and children, and is good for any lake or stream in the state.

City Clerk James Marselles stated that it is necessary to procure a license before one can fish off the local pier. Game Warden Henry Kern is planning to start vigorous campaign against violators of the law and will not hesitate at arresting those who fail to have permits.

The rush for fishing licenses is just starting at the city offices. When the weather warms up and the fish begin biting, the number seeking licenses will increase rapidly. The law calling for licenses went into effect last year.

Fred Kirschner, supervisor from Cuba township was elected chairman of the county board, in a contest with Supervisor Edward A. Martin, of Newport township.

Supervisor Kirschner received 19 votes in the first ballot and Supervisor Martin, 13. Supervisor Emil Ficke, of Elia, received one vote but emphatically denies that he cast it for himself. He accuses Supervisor E. Brown, of Avon township.

Supervisor Kirschner, who served as chairman during a former term, thanked the members of the board for bestowal of the honor. He asked for their co-operation to make this the most successful year for Lake county.

Supervisor Martin moved that Supervisor Kirschner be elected unanimously. The motion carried.

Supervisor H. C. W. Meyer who acted as temporary chairman, W. E. Bletsch and C. E. Austin were named as committee on rules.

The board received a communication from the Lake County Farm Bureau for their interest and appropriation for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

The board was asked to consider the equipping of its vaults and safes with a tear gas device for the prevention of burglaries. The equipment would cost about $1,000, it was estimated.

The board voted to meet April 26, for the purpose of naming the various committees, and in the meantime the old committees will continue to function.

Dr. Charles Lieber, superintendent of the Lake County General Hospital submitted his annual report to the county board and asked that body to consider him a candidate for reappointment. The board also received a recommendation from the hospital committee stating that Dr. Lieber has been very efficient and that he has co-operated to the fullest extent with the committee and members of the board in making the hospital a high class institution and that the doctor and his staff have rendered inestimable service to the county.

No action was taken on the petition because the board will meet again a week from next Saturday for completion of its organization.

The annual report was as follows:
Number of patients, 1,107.
Number of beds, 65.
Number of employees, 30.
Receipts, $21,609.
Number of births, 142.
Average number of patients cared for daily, 56.

RAIN HELPS TO PUT OUT BLAZE

Several thousand dollars damage was caused at the farm of John Mines, Waukegan road about one-half mile south of the Lake Bluff station a week ago Tuesday night when the barn belonging to Mines was struck by lightning and totally destroyed.

Lightning struck the barn at 8:30 o'clock and caused an instant flame. The barn was filled with hay. Residents of the house which was located near the barn discovered the blaze in time to get the animals and a few tools out before the building collapsed.

The Lake Bluff and Lake Forest fire departments were on the job to prevent the spreading of flames. Rain started coming down heavily at that time and aided the fire-fighters in bringing the fire under control.

Due to the combustible nature of the barn, however, it was impossible to save the structure. Loss was estimated at about $5,000.

GOOD LIGHTING RINGS THE CASH REGISTER

In seven stores out of ten the merchant has failed to make use of the advantages of adequate lighting to draw customers and to increase sales according to a recent survey of 1,000 stores of all types and sizes.

Of the 2,000,000 stores in the United States, it is estimated that but one in twenty has an interior illumination intensity of ten foot-candles, and but one in twenty-five has as much as fifteen foot-candles of window illumination, although the economy of this lighting is clearly demonstrable.

One series of tests showed that a shop window lighted to fifteen foot-candles of intensity, the approximate average, caused 200 persons an hour to stop and look in; whereas the same window lighted to forty foot-candles attracted 244 persons, and when lighted to 100 foot-candles it attracted 284 customers.

To light the window to 15 foot-candles cost approximately eight cents an hour, and at this intensity of illumination it was estimated to produce a net profit of one dollar an hour.

To light the same window to 100 foot-candles cost eighteen cents an hour. The additional ten cents cost of illumination produced an additional profit to the merchant of forty-two cents an hour or thirty-two cents increase.

WATERED STOCK

When hit by a street car a common mongrel becomes a thoroughbred in court, a 1914 flivver becomes a 1924 limousine—and in a recent suit brought against a Pennsylvania railroad a cow almost became an artesian well.

"How much milk did the cow give?" the plaintiff was asked.

"Eight quarts."

"How much of this did you sell?"

"Twelve quarts."

The jury capitalized the cow on a twelve-quart a day basis.
